Addresses the United Irish Societies of Chicago and Vicinity.

Greeted by a Great Throng of People Who Cheer His Utterances.

Masterful Argument Against Imperialism and Foreign Alliance.

QUOTES FROM HISTORY OF IRELAND

The annual meeting and outing of the United Irish Societies of Chicago and vicinity occurred Wednesday at Sunny-side Park. Though the weather was threatening there was a tremendous attendance and the occasion was enjoyable and memorable. The meeting was presided over by Rev. Father F. L. Reynolds, a well known and able clergyman. Before the speaking began Judge Ganon introduced the following, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That we fully appreciate and thoroughly understand the heroism which was so conspicuously shown by our brothers in taking up the cause of the Boers.

"Resolved, That we are opposed to the spirit of imperialism and Anglo-Saxonism now rampant in certain quarters, and are determined to give unflinching opposition to any attempt to bind our republic to a policy that would fasten upon it European habits and monarchical institutions."

Father Reynolds introduced the speakers, among whom were William Jennings Bryan, Adlai Stevenson, John F. Finerty and others, all of whom were given a hearty reception and close attention. Mr. Bryan, the first speaker, aroused the greatest enthusiasm and was frequently interrupted by prolonged cheering and applause. He spoke as follows:

I do not want you to think that my happiness depends upon any public office within the gift of the people of this country. I have a higher ambition than to be President. The man whose happiness depends upon what others do for him may be doomed to disappointment, but if one's happiness depends upon what he does for others he need not be disappointed. I hope you will credit me with the ambition that is within the reach of every citizen of this land, an ambition which all can entertain, and which, to my mind, is a higher ambition than that for any office, and that is an ambition to do what I can to make this nation so great and so good that to be a simple citizen will be greater than to be a king in any other land.

I am not here this afternoon to flatter your pride by telling you what the descendants of Erin have accomplished. I am not going to dwell upon the work of the sons of Erin, because it would take all the afternoon and leave me no time to speak of what the daughters of Erin have also done. The work of the Irishmen in the development of this country is too well known to need detailed description. The people of your race have given to the world the highest examples of oratory; they have been distinguished in poetry and in music, in business and statesmanship; you have had millions who have taught the world how to live, and you have had an Emmet who taught the world how to die.

A Voice—Your name should be O'Brien. (Laughter and applause.)

Mr. Bryan—My friend has tried to ingratiate me into your favor by suggesting that my name is "O'Brien" and not "Bryan." If the gentleman knew as much about it as I do he would know that "Bryan" is the original name and "O'Brien" a derivation. When "Bryan" became king he put on the "O" and the "O'Briens" are the descendants of the king, while the "Bryans" are the common people who never got stuck up about a relative being a king. (Laughter and applause.)

The object of my speech is a practical one. I want to use this occasion to point to a great lesson. I believe the fact that this nation has here the representatives of all of the races of Europe gives it a peculiar advantage among the nations. The fact that the best blood of all the civilized races mingles here in the development of the American character enables this nation to turn upon every question the light of universal history and avoid the dangers from which other nations have suffered. When a problem arises in this country we can look back and find what has been the experience of others. If we know the history of our own people only we would not be so well prepared to detect danger before we suffer from it, but if any one does not know the growth of landlordism and its dangers he has only to ask an Irishman what landlordism means, and he need not read history to find it out. If any one wants to know whether an alien government is good, all he has to do is to ask an Irishman what his opinion is of an alien government, although the governing power be separated from the governed only by a narrow channel. If you want to know what militarism is and what its burdens are, all you have to do is to ask a German who came to this country to avoid the militarism of the Old World. And so I might go through the various experiences of other nations. The fact that we have here the representatives of these people enables us to scent the danger from afar and to guard against their experiences here. And I miss my guess if the American people, thus made up, will not develop a civilization higher, greater and more enduring than any civilization which has preceded ours.

When any one tells me that we want to imitate an Anglo-Saxon civilization I tell him that an American civilization is higher than any other—no matter what it is. I do not mean to say one word against an Anglo-Saxon. I have not a word to say against the Celt, the Latin, the Greek or the Teuton. But I do believe that the American, in whom are combined the virtues of them all, is the greatest citizen the world has ever known. And that the civilization to be developed here will lift humanity to a higher plane than it has occupied in the days gone by.

Some people fear that these elements, brought in from the Old World, will not properly mix here. They are mixing, and they will mix, and let me show you what it is that mixes them and makes them one. We are quoting Abraham Lincoln now more than he is quoted by the party which he led to its first victory, and in reading a little book recently prepared by Dr. Taylor and Mr. Fulfiller, a little book that is simply a collection of Lincoln's sayings on political questions, I ran across a passage which I thought appropriate for this afternoon's meeting. He was always speaking of the Declaration of Independence. He was speaking of those who in the early days gave to us that Declaration and erected it as a beacon-light for all posterity, and after he had spoken of our ancestors in this country, he used the words to which I now invite your attention:

"We have besides these, men—descended by blood from our ancestors—among us, perhaps half our people, who are not descendants at all of these men; they are men who have come from Europe—German, Irish, French and Scandinavian—men that have come from Europe themselves, or whose ancestors have come hither and settled here, finding themselves equals in all things. If they look back through this history to trace their connections with those days by blood they find they have none. They can not carry themselves back into that glorious epoch and make themselves feel that they are a part of us, but when they look through that old Declaration of Independence they find that those old men say that 'we hold these truths to be self-evident, that is that all men are created equal,' and then they feel that that moral sentiment, taught in that day, evidences their relation to those men, that is the father of all moral principle in them, and that they have a right to claim it as though they were blood of the blood and flesh of the flesh of the men who wrote that Declaration that links the hearts of patriotic and liberty-loving men together, that will link those patriotic hearts as long as the love of freedom exists in the minds of men throughout the world."

Those are the words of Lincoln, and in his plain and simple way he explained why it is that no matter from what nation a man comes, if he comes believing in that Declaration of Independence, he becomes one of us, and can fraternize with all others who believe in that high principle. That, he says, is the electric cord, that is the vital thing that connects us all; and today, in the presence of a great and overshadowing issue, it is well for us to remember that we have brought the people from the Old World with the promise that here they shall get liberty as it was taught by the fathers. If today we are willing to abandon those principles, then we must stand before the world convicted of having brought people here under false pretenses.

Messrs. John Holland, Max Traut and Martin Minogue and the committee worked zealously the past week and report the prospects very encouraging. They hope as many as can come will do so and promise all a good time. The sale of tickets is reported quite large. Those of our readers who enjoy a good picnic should not miss this one, and thereby assist Rev. Father O'Grady in his good work.

Next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings will witness what promises to be the gala social event of the season in the vicinity of Twenty-seventh and Chestnut streets. For some time past arrangements have been under way for the lawn fete to be given on those dates for the benefit of the school connected with St. Charles Borromeo's church. Rev. Father Raffo, the well-known and popular pastor, and a number of prominent ladies and gentlemen of the congregation have been arranging for the entertainment of their friends, who can be counted in all the congregations of this city. The fete will be held on the school grounds at Twenty-seventh and Chestnut streets, which have been placed in excellent order, and the many varicolored decorations will present a scene surpassing in brilliancy all similar events of this season.

The afternoons will be devoted to the little folks, for whose entertainment and amusement special preparations have been made. The ladies and gentlemen interested in this pleasant affair are so many that we have not space for their names.

Luncheon will be served by the married women, while the refreshments will be dispensed by the pretty girls of the congregation. The programme includes several delightful features, any of which are worth more than the small price of admission—ten cents.

AMUSEMENT

Provided For Thousands at Picnic and Lawn Fete Next Week.

St. Aloysius' Society Will Celebrate Monday at Phoenix Hill Park.

Delightful Lawn Fete For the Benefit of St. Charles' School.

MANY NEW FEATURES ARRANGED FOR

It is said that the largest and most enjoyable picnic yet witnessed this season at Phoenix Hill will be that given Monday afternoon and evening by St. Aloysius' Society for the benefit of St. Aloysius' church, of which Rev. Father O'Grady is the hard-working and indefatigable pastor. The ladies and gentlemen members of the society and congregation have been busy for several weeks completing the arrangements and will have numerous pleasing attractions with which to amuse their friends and patrons. The officers and committee for this occasion are as follows:

General Manager—John J. Holland. Assistant Manager—Frank Olgies. Secretary—Max Traut. Arrangements Committee—Jacob Wagendorfer, Dr. Francis Clark, John Welch, Sr., Charles Kelty, Martin Minogue and James O'Connell.

Music Director—Dennis Minogue; assistant, George Schweinbeck.

Floor Managers—Wm. Garrity, Herman Mueller, William Minogue, William Pope, George Habich and John Ludwig. Col. Tim Sullivan and Dr. Francis Clark were appointed by Manager Holland a special committee to look after the wants and comforts of the gentlemen. Better selections could not have been made.

The ladies are also taking the liveliest interest in this affair and are determined not to be outdone by the gentlemen. With this end in view they organized several weeks ago, selecting Mrs. Henry Stephens for their President. She has enlisted the services of a large number of lovely women and young girls, who will attract admirers from all parts of the city. The wheels, where a large number of prizes will be awarded, will be in charge of Misses Mary Moran, Mary Dugan, Mesdames John Sullivan, Douglas Masterson and John Reilhan. They will attract large crowds.

In the dining room there will be served an excellent dinner for a small sum and refreshments in abundance by the following: Mesdames John Holland, Shadburn, Maloney, Herbert, Rademaker, Byrnes, Ameling, Van Gries and Misses Rosella Myers, Addie Boylen, Anna Heimberger, Rose Pope and Sophie Ameling.

At the refreshment stand will be found a bevy of beauties in Misses Annie Sullivan, Maggie Kennedy, Julia Moran, Mary McDonough, Mrs. Joseph Wattle and others, who will dispense sweets of all kinds and add to the cheerfulness of the picnic.

Miss Rose Murphy will during the evening introduce an amusing cake walk, participated in by the following little ladies and gentlemen: Genevieve Keely, Elizabeth Moore, Marie Keely, Theresa Kaelin, Mary Moore, Flora Gogle, Allie Moore, Peter Bauscher, Louis Gogle, Roy Bauscher, Isaac Gogle, Harrison Doll, Ferdi Gnau, Cassie Doll.

Messrs. John Holland, Max Traut and Martin Minogue and the committee worked zealously the past week and report the prospects very encouraging. They hope as many as can come will do so and promise all a good time. The sale of tickets is reported quite large. Those of our readers who enjoy a good picnic should not miss this one, and thereby assist Rev. Father O'Grady in his good work.

With the death of William Broderick an exemplary citizen has passed away. He has been a resident of this city for many years, living with his family at 1006 Zane street. The deceased, who was fifty-two years old, has for some time been suffering from a complication of diseases, to which he succumbed Sunday morning. He leaves several children, all grown, to mourn his loss. His funeral was largely attended at St. Louis Bertrand's Tuesday morning, when solemn requiem mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul.

Jeremiah Larguey, who died at Sts. Mary and Elizabeth Hospital last Sunday morning, came to this country over fifty years ago, locating in Baltimore. After the civil war he became the hook-keeper for Dennis Shanahan, the railroad contractor. For the past twelve years he had been in feeble health. His funeral took place at the Cathedral, Rev. Father Lynch officiating. The remains were taken to Virginia by Gran Smith's Sons for interment. The deceased was about eighty years of age, and was the uncle of Mrs. D. Shanahan, Second and Breckinridge.

RECENT DEATHS.

Stephen Kerrigan died Monday morning at Sts. Mary and Elizabeth Hospital of old age. He had been an inmate of the hospital for many years, where he employed his time in keeping the grounds in order. He was born in County Mayo, Ireland, and was known as a Christian gentleman. His funeral took place Tuesday, Rev. Father Crane conducting the services.

Inexpressible sorrow followed the announcement of the death of William Cain, which occurred Saturday night at his residence, 2114 Gilligan street. The deceased leaves three children, his wife having died some time ago. He was forty years of age, and his death was caused by tuberculosis. There was a large attendance of mourning friends and relatives at the solemn funeral services held at St. Cecilia's on Monday morning.

Michael Purley, a well-known young man of the West End, died Sunday evening at the residence of his cousin, George Trager, 2721 West Madison street. He was the son of James and Bridget Curley, and his death at the early age of thirty years caused sincere sorrow to his many friends. For some time he had been employed at Seelbach's Hotel. His funeral took place from St. Charles' church Tuesday morning, and the remains were interred in St. Louis cemetery.

With the death of William Broderick an exemplary citizen has passed away. He has been a resident of this city for many years, living with his family at 1006 Zane street. The deceased, who was fifty-two years old, has for some time been suffering from a complication of diseases, to which he succumbed Sunday morning. fication and salvation of our own souls. That, my dear friends, ought to be the object of every Christian life, and it matters not in what sphere our life may be, whether priest or layman, whether devoted to God or to the material interests of this world, all things tend to those objects—the honor and glory of God and the sanctification and salvation of our souls. For, after all, my dear friends, unless all our acts are for these two purposes, they are lost and will avail us nothing either here or in eternity, and what a consoling thought it will be to us when we have to leave this world if we shall have persevered in God's holy law, and we can look back upon our lives and say candidly and sincerely we have tried to do God's holy work and we can feel that our life has not been spent here in vain, that it has not been lost.

In speaking to you this morning and telling you that I thank you, I am sincere because I feel that you have done much to make my life a happy one, and were I left to my own feelings and to my own wishes I would stay not for three or six years, but for my whole life with you, but this can not be. We have our superiors to obey without asking why or wherefore, and while I will never forget the generous and hearty spirit which you have manifested toward me, I will ask for who ever succeeds me that you give him the same kind consideration and the same generous and hearty co-operation that you have given me.

My dear friends, in conclusion, I will ask that you at some time say a prayer that God may give me the necessary strength and help to do my duty where I may be stationed.

Walters Brothers' Day Celebrated at Knights of Rest Camp.

About a thousand persons visited the Knights of Rest outing camp Wednesday, which was designated Walters Brothers' day, in honor of the genial and popular Clay-street brewers. There were all kinds of games, with plenty to eat and drink, and all those present had a jolly good time. Manager Andrew Wall had provided for his guests an elegant dinner and supper, which were devoured with avidity.

During the afternoon and evening several hundred carriages arrived at the camp, bringing friends of the Messrs. Walters, and the throng was the largest of the year.

LYING ABOUT NOTHING.

A very sensational article and sentimental as well concerning Fra Stanislaus, of Gethsemani, appeared a few days since in an Eastern journal. Very miraculous yarns are spun out to the extent of half a page, the rest of the page being occupied with wonderful illustrations concerning the worthy frater. There is such a halo of mystery to these knights of the pen surrounding everything monastic that their imagination runs to riot when they have anything on hand like a young man leaving the seminary for a life in the world. The whole day, from sunrise to sunset, in these institutions is taken up with the matter-of-fact duties of keeping clean the floors, dishes, clothing and mending the shoes, wearing apparel, etc., of the members composing these communities. The simple fact that they live in these places in harmony and contentment seems to be the cause of all the wonder and mystery that encompass them. Their lives are so very simple and free from complexities of any and all kinds that they easily surpass the comprehension of worldlings who are naturally engrossed with anxiety and perturbation from the first hour of manhood to the time when nature loses its charms and mortality ceases. When people become more intelligent and more thoughtful, reflecting conscientiously on the various reasons and impulses that originate their own actions, they will not be so dreadfully surprised and so maliciously anxious to compose whole yards of lying stories about—nothing.

ENGLISH PERFIDY.

The Chinese muddle is still mysterious and complicated, and the wherefore is becoming manifest to the confusion and disgrace of England, who seems to have been guilty of almost incredible falsehood, base hypocrisy, double dealing little short of treachery, and the utterly dishonorable trick of delaying, mutilating and purloining official dispatches to and from China of Ministers, Consuls and their respective governments. England owns and controls the only Chinese cable at Shanghai. The horrifying details of the murder and outrages on Ministers and other foreigners in Pekin, all purporting to come from the Chinese Capital, via Shanghai, have been proven sheer fabrications emanating from Shanghai and London, being repudiated by the officials of every telegraph line in China. English duplicity is being more fully exposed, owing to the shrewd and determined course inaugurated and pursued by the United States Government, by which it opened up and maintains cipher communication, through Chinese officials, with the Ministers in Pekin and Consuls in other Chinese cities. The first dispatch from Minister Conger was denounced in London as a counterfeit concocted by Chinese officials, but when verified by American Consuls and the furnishing of the original dispatch from the Pekin office, dispatches from other Ministers to their governments quickly followed, few of them having dates, however, all of which had been evidently delayed. Investigation proved this, and further that the delay was at Shanghai, as clearly indicated in the case of the French Minister, whose undated dispatch was delivered to his government in Paris two weeks after its contents had been published in a London paper, furnished by its Shanghai correspondent, who was trusted and detested by every government of the world?

The British Government is considering and conferring with the Canadian Government with the purpose of constructing a waterway from the sea coast so that war vessels can be placed on the great lakes and railroad facilities provided for the quick transportation of troops to defend the Canadian border. Does this mean that England fears war with her "only friend in the world," the United States? It seems so. At any rate, these purposes indicate an intention to violate the boundary treaty with the United States, which excludes armed vessels or military from the great lakes, rivers and highways on the border, and guarantees to each the free and unrestricted use of the same for commerce. England has never fully observed these guarantees, having frequently been compelled to abrogate discriminating tolls and regulations against American commerce. As the United States Government has promptly insisted on compliance with this treaty heretofore, it can be relied upon that any attempt of England to carry out her proposed scheme for placing armed vessels on the lakes and rivers and an armed force on the border will be promptly resented and resisted. England ought to know from appearance that the United States will tolerate none of her schemes. It is not unlikely that our next war may be with England, who is just now in a surly mood from reverses and seems anxious to bump up against some nation who will give her what she needs—a sound thrashing.

Added to this, all London dispatches concerning the allied forces in China are clearly colored to gratify English vanity and discredit of the Russians and French, who are charged with shirking the fighting and committing outrages, leaving the brunt of the campaign to the American, Japanese and English. The facts are that the English have but a small force in the relief army marching on Pekin; that all the fighting thus far has been by the Americans, French, Japanese and Russians; that the "fake" first advance on Pekin under the British Admiral, which resulted in disaster, was only saved from annihilation by the French, who defeated the Chinese move to surround the force and cut off their retreat, and the French held this flank until the force was rescued by the Russians who had fought their way from Tien Tsin, and under continuous attack escorted the exhausted troops to safety at Tien Tsin, the Chinese part of which with adjacent forts were subsequently captured, principally by Russian troops and artillery.

Even in the army now fighting for relief of the imprisoned Ministers (the English Ministers included) the English force is small, the main English force, 9,000 men, having been sent to Shanghai to occupy the Yangtse Kiang country instead of going to join the relief army, as promised and expected. The Chinese Viceroy has refused to allow the English troops to land at Shanghai, and England is balked in this scheme, as China can rely on being backed in this refusal by the other powers, especially if she releases the Ministers at Pekin.

Finally England seems to realize that her cajoling of Uncle Sam has been to no purpose, and has turned her slander against the Americans. A London dispatch charges that United States Consul Hollis, at Lorenzo Marques, has visited President Kruger, at Pretoria, before its surrender to Gen. Roberts; that Kruger had requested Hollis to give him asylum in the American Consulate, and that the American government had refused and rebuked Consul Hollis—all of which is a lie, pure and simple, Consul Hollis having never been to Pretoria, visited Kruger nor made any such report to the State department.

It is any wonder England is dis-

trusted and detested by every government of the world?

It has required so far $9,000,000 of gold from New York to hold up the London market, and we can easily spare it at a good rate of interest. Just think of England being forced to borrow and pay interest to blasted Americans! But Johnny Bull is having a deal of trouble and is slightly run down at the heel just now. The rate of interest in London is and has been for weeks double the normal. No explanation is needed to show England's financial straits.

Labor day is now near at hand. All indications point to a monster demonstration. Already nearly every union in the city is making special preparations for the grand parade, and all business houses and factories are expected to observe the workingman's holiday.
